

The Microbial Tank Farm

This is where it all started for me in 1973. A backyard project that served as the initial project to demonstrate that unused plant material such as weeds could be degraded by microbes which could then be used to feed fish.

I used 55 gallon drums, five gallon pails, one gallon jugs, and a variety of other bottles, tubing, and pipes to use goldenrod and other weeds in a microbial process to feed fish.